pH: 6.75 - 7.25

Diet

Betta feed on zooplankton, crustaceans, and the larvae of mosquitoes and other water-bound insects. In captivity they can be fed a varied diet of pellets or frozen foods such as brine shrimp, bloodworms, daphnia and many others.

Habitat

- Can be kept in small tanks, 3 gallons or more is ideal.
- If regularly maintained, no filtration is necessary.
- Keep your tank away from drafts and cool breezes.
- Live plants provide a place for your fish to relax while keeping the water clean and oxygenated.

Behaviour

- Male Bettas flair their fins and gills in an impressive territorial display.
- Can be aggressive towards brightly colored fish.
- Do not house more than one betta together.
- In a closed environment, males will fight to the death.

Keoki Stender Wrasse is a sturdy wrasse that adapts very well to the life of the aquarium. Also will you will virtually any other fish that fits into your mouth. It is quite long life and grows great (until 15 inches), so it must have a great aquarium. The wrasses can catch internal and external bacterial diseases easily. Given the abundance of places to hide, it will solve the right in a non-aggressive tank. Distinctive by his impressive coloring, the beautifully ornate Fiji Christmas Wrasse is also known in the comment of fish as the red-lined wrasse or biocellate. While it is considered a reasonably safe fish for the reefs, it may die big rocky corals polypados, zoanthodes, chests of tridacned molluses and even some soft coral powders. In general, this fish gets well with other fish in the aquarium, but can be aggressive against other yellow spikes and surgeons fish if they are not introduced in the aquarium at the same time. The four-aligned bug is a smaller species, which comes out better in less belligerent aquariums, but can act aggressively against more peaceful wrasses and other small fish. This wrasse does not bury in the sand to sleep at night, but stay on the substrate or take refuge in the rocks. This fish is very tender and will not leave the hiding place unless you feel safe. Larry Jordan The spotted pink goby watcher spends his time sifting sand to remove small food particles. It is rarely aggressive in relation to other fish sports, it is territorial and will fight with others of the same species, unless they are a mated couple.
